THE LIST OF THE DEAD.

Col. Tileston's Beath-How Mrs. Regeman her Maid, and Mrs. Willetts were Killed. To the deaths of Mrs. Hegeman, her maid, Mary Connolly, and Mrs. Willetts, that of Col. William M. Tileston, who died yesterday from his wounds, is to be added, making a total of

Col. William M. Tileson was well known as a sporting writer, and was one of the Executive Committee of the coming dog show. He was editor and proprietor of the Country, one of the editors of the Forest and Stream, and a writer for the Turf, Field, and Farm. He also compiled a work entitled "Points of the Dog." He was an enthusiastic breeder of dogs, and his visit to Madison Square Garden on Wednesday night was in company with H. Walter Webb, parity with reference to the show. They had finished the business, and not knowing of any danager, and not having heard the rumors inside the building, were outher the wall fell, and flying plees of the door the wall fell, and flying plees of the door the wall fell, and flying plees of the door the wall fell, and flying plees of the door the wall fell, and flying plees of the door the wall fell, and flying plees of the door the wall fell, and flying plees of the door the wall fell, and flying plees of the door the wall fell, and flying plees of the door the wall fell, and flying plees of the door the wall fell, and flying plees of the door the wall fell, and flying plees of the door the wall fell, and flying plees of the door the wall fell, and flying plees of the door the wall fell, and flying plees of the door the wall fell, and flying plees of the door the wall fell, and flying plees of the door the wall fell, and flying plees of the door the wall fell, and flying plees of the door the wall fell, and flying flyin editors of the Forest and Stream, and a writer for the Turf, Field, and Farm. Leonard Dimer of 14 West Forty-sixth street. Mr. Dater, who suffered contusions about the limbs and hack and was taken to Bellevue Hostital, was discharsed, yesterday morning and returned to the home of his father, Mr. H. R. Dater, the broker.

E. L. Dows, 22 Waverley place. Mr. Dows had his left hand crushed, and he was somewhat his left hand crushed, and he was somewhat hruised on other norts of his body. His hand was drassed at the New York Hospital, and he was taken home by friends. Yesterday he was in a comfortable condition.

Michael Kelly. Kelly is a lack driver in the employ of Norman & Benton of S01 Sixth avenue. He was knocked from his seat and bruised by the falling bricks. His escape from death was remarkable.

E. L. Lehman of 172 Lexington avenue. Mr. Lehman had the great toe of his left foot broken, and was contisted elsewhere. He was considerably exhausted yesterday, and unable to leave his hed.

Miss Annie Scoville, 134 West Twenty-fourth street. Miss Scoville was bruised, but suffered no broken bones. She was improved yesterday.

James D. Smith, Flushing, L. I. Mr. Smith had saveral bruises, but was able to go to his home.

Miss Josie B. Streeter, 7 West Thirty-first street, Miss Streeter was very badly bruised and injured internally. She had improved markedly yesterday, and its hoped she may recover. Miss Streeter was among those who were crushed beneath the roof as it fell into the dancing room.

Ernest A. Thompson, 298 Madison avenue. Mr. Thompson was cut about the head and very badly bruised. He was in the dancing that at the time of the accident. He was confined to his bed yesterday.

H. Walter Webl, 14 West Thirty-eighth street, Mr. Webb was burled on being hear to get her to a meeting of the managers of the coming Bench Doc Show, and that he was co Webb, vesterday, to ascertain the extent of his injuries.

The reports of injuries to Mr. H. Herrick of West Forjy-fourth street, to Dr. Valentine Mott, and J. W. Swan, are untrue. All of the nersons severely hurt, it is believed, have been reported. Many of those slightly injured wentto their homes and no record could be got of them. The exact number of persons hurt will probably never be known. In some instances persons slightly burt declined to give their names for publication.

Again yesterday section after section of gray-clad, slender-waisted cadets marched to the door of the Library building in West Point, and were detailed to answer, before the court of inquiry into the Whittaker affair, the set of questions that Recorder Sears has repeated over and over again incessantly during nearly the whole of three days' sessions.

At the close of the morning session of the court all the students in the Academy except two had been examined. Recorder Sears said that these two are Cadets Cragan and Gilman, who quitted the post on Monday on sick leave. They will be required to make sworn answer to the questions put to their companions, in spring and summer of last year it was noticed affidavits returned by mail.

Mrs. Ryan, the wife of Philip Byan, the Highland Falls saloon keeper; her daughter Emma; Mrs. Brannigan, the wife of a cavairyman; Lewis Simpson, the bath keeper; William Saunders, the post dentist, who says he knows public opinion here because he" opens people's mouths," and John Turner, a boiler-house man, each testified in turn, without apparently contributing to the solution of the mystery.

After this Walter Mitchell, the Adjutant's colored servant, took the stand. The result of his testimony was to set everybody by the ears and to bring about an altercation more serious than any since the trial opened. He is freekled, and wears long. Dundreary whiskers. He thought this outrage was a political affair. Money and blood had been spent in try-ing to make a people of the Africans, Augustus Van Saun of Cherry Hill, being on Unsophisticated Farmer's Boy, was Victimized by an Unscrupulous Neighbor.

Augustus Van Saun is a handsome, fairhaired youth of twenty-one years, who aids his father on a milk farm on Cherry Hill, near Hackensack, N. J. His eyes are blue, and until a year ago his complexion was reseate with health and spirits. He had led a blameless life, and among all her sons he was his mother's favorite. He used to go about the house and farm whistling and singing, but during the that he had jost his spirits. He grew paler than was his wont, and carried his head down. It was thought he was sick. What it was that was preying upon his health was developed in a trial that took place yesterday in the Oyer and Terminer Court in Hackensack.

Augustus Van Saun started with his brother Alfred in the milk wagon, on a Saturday evening, to go to Hackensack to get his hair cut. As they passed the house of their next neighbor. James D. Bogert, a highly respectable farmer, his son, John R. Bogert, jumped into the wagon and rode along. John R. Bogert is 22 years old. He and Augustus Van Saus had known each other from early boyhood, but they had never been associates. John. R. Bogert was reputed to be the black sheep of his family. When they arrived at Main street, in Hackensack, Bogert proposed that they should call on Miss Delia Goetchius, a modest and attractive young lady, who lives with her parents in Cottage

"She asked me if I had got in a muss, you Mr. Campbell know." VaniSaun testified yeasteristy, as he persistently tried to swallow something in his throat, "and I told her no, you know. Then she asked me if I had to say. Well, something kind of like that," because I will something kind of like that, "because I will something kind of like that," because I added that he had explained the joke to Van Saundall want to tell her. I was assumed. But she made me tell her averything, and I told her all about it, and she went and told father, and he seem through the five indictments only. He was convicted in the indictments only. He was convicted in each case, and for each offence he may be sentanced to improve to five years imprisonment of $1000 fine, or both, in the discretion of the Judge.
